THE CLC, and the GREAT COMMISSION - (II)

As the Church of the Lutheran Confession embarks on a second half century, there comes to mind the word of the Lord: “Commit your way unto the Lord; trust also in Him ...” (Psalm 37:5). It is not for us to try to read the future, but to turn our will, our future and our hope for ourselves as well as for our church body over completely and without reservation to Him. Committing our future to the Lord does not mean that we can drop out “because the Lord will look after it.” When our Lord committed the exercise of His prophetic office to the apostles they took the charge seriously—they continued steadfastly in the doctrine, “And they went out and preached everywhere ...” (Mark 16:20). As members of the a confessional Lutheran church body known as the Church of the Lutheran Confession—and this by God’s grace and unmerited favor—we are to stand fast in the doctrine no less than the apostles did. Furthermore, as confessing Christians we are to be engaged in every facet of the work to which the Lord has called His Church.

The Lord can make known His will for the salvation of the sinner miraculously and without means. However, He chooses to win hearts by working through the means of grace, the Gospel in word and sacrament. He has committed the means of grace to the Church, and has chosen to minister these means through His people who are to be bearers of the Word of salvation to the entire world. To the accomplishment of His saving will our Father in Christ Jesus commands that His Word be taught faithfully. Whether His Word is spoken by an individual or whether it be the witness of the Church, it is to be spoken faithfully.

As members of Christ’s Church who have been brought into the fellowship of a confessional church, we of the CLC have assumed a responsibility. By the power of the Spirit our fathers declared that they were committed to preach the Scriptures faithfully and to confess without reservation the doctrines of Scripture set forth in the Book of Concord of 1580. Only by such commitment could they justify the formulation of a new church body.

We recognize that with thanksgiving to the Lord 50 years later. But even as we do, we can do no less than to recommit ourselves in this generation to the cause that gave them purpose! We dare not adopt a laissez faire attitude. We dare not become indifferent in matters of faith, or become neglectful of the responsibility that He has laid upon us as His representatives on earth. We have asked the question many times. “Will there be a confessional church such as the CLC 10 years from now, to say nothing of 50 years from now,” and more pointedly, “Do we care?” Though we know that whatever our Lord wills will serve to our good, a thousand woes upon us if we don’t care!

Redeemed, caring children of God look forward to the heavenly inheritance purchased at the price of Christ’s blood. Surely we will gladly commit and recommit ourselves to the Lord and His Word to the benefit of our own souls as well as for the welfare of the congregation and church body in which we are privileged to hear the Word of God proclaimed faithfully and regularly. We will manifest this commitment through prayer, faithful attendance at worship and sacrament, steadfast confession of the Word before the world, as well as through the financial support of our congregation as the Lord blesses us, and through financial and physical support toward those things that we have agreed upon as brethren within the church body.

But this leads to some hard personal questions. If we are indeed mindful of the Lord’s grace and promise in Christ Jesus, if we are thankful for the gift of eternal life, why on a given Sunday is half of the congregation missing from worship? If we truly believe that God’s Word is truth and that all the Bible is the Word of God, how can any among us consider leaving a confessional church—or drop out completely—to become part of a fellowship—whether a congregation or a church body—in which there is not the same respect for God’s Word? If we are truly committed to the Word and faith, how can anyone even entertain selling his principles on the altar of expediency to gain the favor of the world, or to advance a personal agenda? How can anyone who honestly committed himself to the Lord and His Word in confirmation, buy into the idea of compromising churches that promote the idea that the formal exercise of religion by itself is more important than the substance of what is taught or believed?

Believers in Christ through the ages have been mocked and ridiculed. Jesus told the apostles it would be so (Matthew 10). The history of the Church in Acts bears out the words of the Lord. Believers who are part of a confessional church fellowship such as ours must expect to endure mockery and ridicule even from some within the pale of the Christian church. However, our exhortation and encouragement to commitment (recommitment) is not driven by desire to guarantee perpetuation of the CLC, but rather by a desire to encourage individual self-examination of what one believes. The godly intent and prayer is that personal commitment (recommitment) to the Word and faith will be reinvigorated and translate into activity in the faith life of each of us. We pray that honest self evaluation will lead to recommitment to the Word and the witness of our church body.

Jesus said, “Whoever confesses Me before men, him will I also confess before My Father in heaven. But whoever denies Me before men, him I will also deny before My Father Who is in heaven” (Matthew 10:32, 33). An individual’s commitment is to be measured in the light of the Word, which says, “If you abide in My Word, then you are my disciples indeed, and you shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free” (John 8:32).

The by-product of the Christ believer’s personal commitment (or recommitment) to the Word and faith—born out of personal concern for his salvation and thankfulness for the gift of eternal life through the atonement of Jesus—is that such a person will want to be an active and faithful member of a congregation and church body in which his faith is strengthened. He will pray for, support, and thank the Lord for the faithful congregation and church body of which he is a member because he cares that for those who come after us there will continue to be a haven of truth such as we presently are blessed with in the Church of the Lutheran Confession.

Christ gave all for us, that we might live for Him here and with Him in heaven. They who believe that will not be troubled when they are encouraged to “Commit (or recommit) your way unto the Lord; trust also in Him ...” for they also believe the promise that whatever the cause, as it glorifies the Lord, He “shall bring it to pass.” The Lord will preserve His Word. May we unqualifiedly recommit ourselves to Him that His Word of salvation continues among us!
